"50 Years After the Coup d'État in Argentina: Memory, History, and Human Rights in the NEA"

On March 24, 2026, people in Argentina remember an important and sad event. It happened 50 years ago, in 1976. On that day, a military government started.

During that time, there were many problems. Some people were arrested. Some people disappeared. Many families did not know anything about their loved ones. The government controlled everything and did not allow people to speak freely.

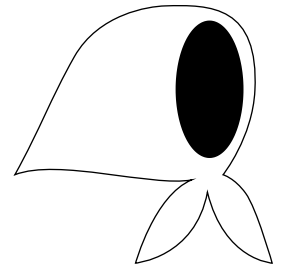

In the northeast of Argentina (NEA), the situation was also difficult. Some workers and students wanted better living conditions. Because of this, they had problems with the government. The repression affected people in cities and in rural areas. Everywhere, communities suffered.

Today, people remember this history. It is important for everyone to learn about the past. Some people try to say that nothing bad happened, but many others work to keep the memory alive.

Remembering this day helps everyone understand the importance of democracy and human rights. People want a future where nobody suffers like before and where everyone can live in peace.
