BECOMING A SPORTS JOURNALIST

Being a professional athlete isn't the only way to work in the world of sports. For people who love sports and writing, becoming a sports journalist is an exciting career choice. A sports journalist reports on games, interviews famous players, and writes articles for newspapers, magazines, or digital media.

To become a sports journalist, you don't have to be a star player, but you have to attend university to study journalism or communications. You also need to understand the rules of many different sports and possess strong writing skills.

The job has many great advantages. Journalists often get free press tickets to major tournaments and travel to foreign countries to cover world championships.

However, the work can be stressful. Journalists have to write their stories very quickly before tight deadlines, and they frequently work on weekends or late at night during live matches. Despite the long hours, sharing exciting sports stories with millions of readers is a dream job for many.

6) Read the text and write T (True) or F (False). Correct the false sentences.

- a. Sports journalists only write for printed newspapers. (T / F)

- b. You must be a star athlete to become a sports journalist. (T / F)

- c. Studying journalism at university is necessary for this career. (T / F)

- d. Sports journalists never travel abroad for work. (T / F)

- e. Writing stories quickly before deadlines can make the job stressful. (T / F)

- f. Sports journalists always work regular weekday office hours. (T / F)

7) Read the text again and choose the correct option (A, B, or C).

- 1. What is this article mainly about?
 - A) How to become a professional athlete.
 - B) Working as a sports journalist.
 - C) Playing sports at university.
- 2. What does a sports journalist do?
 - A) Teaches physical education at high schools.
 - B) Referees official matches in stadiums.
 - C) Interviews players and writes articles about matches.
- 3. What do you have to study at university to do this job?
 - A) Medicine or nursing.
 - B) Journalism or communications.
 - C) Graphic design.
- 4. What is one perk of being a sports journalist?
 - A) Free press tickets to major tournaments.
 - B) Free sports cars from team sponsors.
 - C) Long summer vacations every year.
